FOG AND WIND PREVENT RACE OF TWO WOMEN

Planes Again Forced To Remain Idle As Elements Combine Against Race

ST. JOHNS, N. F., June 14.—Fog and a strong northeast wind today forced postponement at least until tomorrow of the trans-Atlantic airplane race between Miss Amelia Earhart's Friendship and Miss Mabel Boll's Columbia.

The bad weather area extended all along the east coast, and made a start for a trans-Atlantic flight impracticable.

It was reported today that the backers of the Friendship had advised Wilmer Stultz, co-pilot with Miss Earhart, to take the plane to Conception Bay, where it would be easier to get it out of the water.

In a short test flight this morning, after repeated failures to get the plane to rise from Trespasy Bay, Stultz was estimated to have 750 gallons of gasoline aboard—barely enough for a trans-Atlantic flight under best conditions, according to its rated fuel consumption.

The plane with this load lifted well, and made a good landing. Supt. Bridger, of the Cape Race direction finding station, made a hurried motorcycle visit to Stultz last night. This caused the rumor that the Friendship's backers had suggested a move to Conception Bay.

PLATFORM ALL ARRANGED FOR PARTY'S O. K.

Major Planks Indicate Republicans Will Defend Dry Cause In Election Battle

KANSAS CITY, June 14.—The Republican platform was ready for the national convention today.

As finally framed after many painful hours of labor, the document contained four major planks important to the coming campaign and a host of others less spectacular, yet vital to a party fighting to dominate the administration of America.

The major planks are:

Farm relief.

Denunciation of corruption in government.

Denunciation of excessive campaign expenditures and advocacy of publicity to combat such.

It was nearly midnight last night when the full platform committee adopted the platform as already passed by its sub-committee.

The fight in sub-committee and full committee had centered around the farm relief plank.

Pros and antis had battled valiantly, but the plank as finally passed called for the Hoover-Jardine program of aiding cooperative marketing organizations, of creating a federal farm board, and of assisting agriculture through tariff boosts against imported products which compete with American products.

The beaten farm relief advocates served notice on the platform framers that the latter's efforts were unsatisfactory and announced their intention of swooping onto the convention today with their complaints and their minority plank.

The prohibition plank, a stronger pronouncement that the party had taken previously, advocated sturdy enforcement of the 18th amendment. Hitherto platforms had carefully avoided mentioning the famous dry amendment by name, but Senator Borah had prevailed upon the full committee to insert this plank; and many foresaw today that this action probably will put the Republican party into the campaign as the "dry" party.

There has been no actual fight against this amendment, though one had been scheduled.

Corruption in government is mildly denounced in the platform and Senator LaFollette, who has a minority platform, wants a stiffer declaration on this subject.

Campaign expenditures must be kept small, the majority platform declares, adding that publicity will aid this process.

The fight for the equalization fee was led in the full committee by Frank W. Murphy, a Minnesota farm leader. Pitted against him chiefly was Senator Borah, of Idaho, who holds the fee unconstitutional.

Weary newspaper watchers outside the meeting room could hear occasional loud talk as farm leaders and eastern opponents clashed. Sometimes, the meeting was punctuated with applause as a speaker pounded the table around which 50 or more men sat, some of them hunched deeply in their chairs, weary of the long battle. Some of the group had had but little sleep since Wednesday morning, and they were happy when the session closed.

THREE GROUPS AWAIT RESCUE IN FAR NORTH

Frost-Bitten, Living On Limited Rations, Italia's Crew Exists In Hope

KINGS BAY, Spitzbergen, June 14.—Some place north of the frozen island of Northeast Land today are three groups of explorers, frost bitten, living on limited rations and hoping for the quick arrival of expeditions sent out by four nations to save the crew of the dirigible Italia.

The Polar craft was cracked up on ice May 25. One gondola was ripped off the frame work and nine men left on a floating ice bank. The craft swung away with the wind carrying seven other members.

Subsequently three of the nine men on the ice bank started tracking across the frozen waste, seeking to reach some outpost of civilization where they might communicate the plight of the crew to rescue expeditions. These three men today were reported to be Captain Filippo Zappi, Captain Adalberto Mariano and Fenn Malmgren.

That left six men remaining on the spot where the gondola cracked up and included in this number are General Umberto Nobile, Felice Troiani, Natale Cecioni and Giuseppe Biagi according to latest reports here. (It is probable, according to an official announcement from Rome, that Lieut. Alfredo Viglieri and Professor Be-Tounek also are in this group.)

'FATHER'S DAY' TO BE OBSERVED IN CIRCLEVILLE

Marks Sixth Anniversary Of National Movement To Sing Dad's Praises

Marking the sixth anniversary of a national movement, next Sunday, June 17, is Father's Day. It will be Christmas come to Dad in June instead of December.

In Circleville, Father's Day will be variously observed. The ceremonies will be simple, for Father's Day is primarily a family event. It was created by the ordainment of somebody who had a proper appreciation of just what a vital role "the old man" plays in this human scheme of things.

Giving Dad a measure of the credit that is his due just one day of the year isn't such a bad idea, after all.

All the other days of the year Dad is working for almost everybody but himself. The baker and the milkman, the landlord and the grocer all expect Dad to do his duty no matter what happens. And Dad usually comes through.

So, Father's Day deserves recognition. For one day, Dad is entitled to the best chair in the house. He is privileged, for that day, to have the best the family can afford.

Scuffers may joke at the ads suggesting a gift of neckwear, shirts, cigars or a jar of tobacco for father next Sunday. And he will pretend he has not read them, but he will see the ads from the corner of his eye as he passes, feel a certain satisfaction and express a mental hope that he will not be entirely forgotten.

So, Father's Day deserves recognition. For one day, Dad is entitled to the best chair in the house. He is privileged, for that day, to have the best the family can afford.

COOLIDGES ON TRAIN HEADED FOR VACATION

First Lady Of Land Improves In Health And Presidential Party Enjoins

ABOARD PRESIDENT'S SPECIAL, Enroute to Cedar Island Lodge, Wis., June 14.—President and Mrs. Coolidge were speeding toward Wisconsin today to spend their second vacation in two years in the middle west.

Mrs. Coolidge, showing marked improvement from the disability that caused postponement of departure of the presidential party Monday night, was in excellent spirits when she boarded the train last night accompanied by the President and a trained nurse, the first lady sought her private compartment some time before the scheduled departure at 11 o'clock, and immediately retired. She was expected to remain in her car until Superior is reached.

The nurse, Miss Mabel Beet, will remain in constant attendance on Mrs. Coolidge until completion of the trip, and possibly for some time at Cedar Island Lodge. It is hoped that the peaceful seclusion of the Henry Clay Pierce estate on the picturesque Brule river, where the summer executive home is to be established, will prove beneficial to her indisposition and restore her to the excellent health she enjoyed prior to her illness, which first became apparent early last winter and recurred only a few hours before she was to leave Washington last Monday.

Several hundred orphans of Madison, Union and Pickaway counties are counting the days until June 21, when the Columbus Automobile Club will stage its annual Orphans' Outing at Olen-tangy park, Columbus. The event for many years has been outstanding in the lives of the parentless tots.

W. S. Bird, Manager of the Club, which carries its service into the above three counties, announced this week that all arrangements had been made for giving the kiddies a complete day of fun. Toys, of a permanent nature, candy, ice cream, rides on everything and scores of games with prizes will cram the day with joyous things to do.

Mr. Bird makes an appeal for nominal donations from citizens of the three counties to help defray the cost of toys, candy and prizes. The complete cost of the picnic is in excess of $1,000 and, according to custom, this is met by donations ranging from $1 to $10.

"The more money we receive," Mr. Bird said, "the finer picnic we can give the kiddies. It's the one big day a year for them and I'm sure citizens of the three counties outside Franklin will give their liberal support. Checks should be made out to Orphans' Outing Committee and addressed to the Columbus Automobile Club, Southern Hotel, Columbus."

Kiddies from Madison, Pickaway and Union counties will be brought to the park by busses donated by the Club.

FARM RELIEF IS PROMISED WHILE BILL IS IGNORED

Vigorous Enforcement Of Dry Amendment Is Pledged In Lengthy 9,000 Word Document Touching On All Phases Of Government.

By PAUL R. MALLON
United Press Staff Correspondent.

CONVENTION HALL, KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 14.—A party platform embodying the Coolidge doctrines regarding farm relief, international relations and economy was presented to the Republican National convention today by the resolutions committee.

The presidential campaign document promised there would be no deficit in this year's budget, and pledged the strongest prohibition enforcement plank yet presented to a National convention by its committee.

The McNary-Haugen bill theory of farm relief, including the equalization fee, was ignored as a result of the administration forces' victory over the farm bloc in committee, after a sensational battle lasting since Tuesday night.

Promises were made for promotion of farm marketing legislation; for increased tariff on agricultural products affected by foreign competition; for government loans to encourage diversification, and for measures which will place the agricultural interests of America on a basis of economic equality with other industries to insure its prosperity and success.

All through the 9,000-word document the drafters pointed to what the party had done for the farmer. They told how tax reduction had helped him; how the tariff protected him; how inland waterways were being developed for him; how the radio had been fostered for him; how Republican Congresses had passed special legislation for him.

But neither the vetoed McNary-Haugen bill nor the equalization fee system embodied in that measure was mentioned.

There were eight outstanding planks on prohibition, honesty in government, campaign expenses, agriculture, the tariff, foreign policies, labor injunctions and public utilities. They may be summarized with the following excerpts:

Prohibition:
"The people through the method provided by the Constitution have written the Eighteenth amendment into the Constitution. The Republican party pledges itself and its nominees to the observance and vigorous enforcement of this provision of the Constitution."

Honesty in Government:
"We deplore the fact that any official has ever fallen from high standard and that certain American citizens of both parties have so far forgotten their duty as citizens as to traffic in interests for private gain."

Campaign Expenditures:
"The improper use of money in governmental and political affairs is a great national evil. One of the most effective remedies for this abuse is publicity in all matters touching campaign contributions and expenditures."

The Republican party, beginning not later than Aug. 1, 1929, and every 30 days thereafter—last publication being not later than five days before the election—will file with the committees of the House and Senate a complete account of all contributions, the names of the contributors, the amounts expended and for what purposes, and will at all times hold its records and books touching such matters open for inspection.

"The party further pledges that it will not create, or permit to be created, any deficit which shall exist at the close of the campaign."

Agriculture:
"The agricultural problem is national in scope and, as such, is recognized by the party."

THE SLAVES WE OWN

Did you know that every man in the country possesses 175 slaves?

Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern University, has it all figured out. Mechanical power in the United States today rated on a per capita basis, provides manpower at the rate of 175 slaves apiece. You could spend an interesting half hour calculating the number of employees a firm like General Motors would have if these figurative slaves should suddenly become flesh and blood.

President Scott's figures are interesting. They portray graphically the transformation that the spread of mechanical power has brought. The fact that each of us does 175 times as much work as our pre-Civil War ancestors accounts for much of our prosperity. Yes, it is very fine to learn that we have 175 slaves apiece. But there is another related question which Dr. Scott did not try to answer. It is: How many masters have we got?

It is a notable thing to have 175 slaves working for you if you are your own master. But if you are not, what then? Are you any better off than the slaveless man of 1840?

This does not refer to the conditions under which you earn your bread. Naturally, in this day, few men can enjoy a job that knows no superior. It does refer to the conditions under which you order your daily life. Are you, in the real sense, independent? Do you shape your life—your daily conduct, your ideas, your mental processes—according to your wishes, or do you do it according to the dictates of invisible but powerful masters?

A man can own 175 slaves, or triple that number, and yet be a slave himself; a slave for instance, to fear, to conformity, to tradition, to ignorance, to superstition. Some men are even slaves to the mechanical servants that they take them for the be-all and end-all existence.

We have prided ourselves quite long enough on our power and our prosperity. It is about time we began to look a little more deeply into modern life, to see if we really are progressing as fast as we think.

If we are not free ourselves—free to think, act and speak as our own consciences suggest—our myriads of slaves are worse than useless.

OUR STANDARDS SPREAD

Social students who fear that standardization brought about by American industrial methods is having a bad influence on the world will not get any comfort from a report just issued by the American Engineering Standards Committee.

This report reveals that American standardization methods are spreading all over the world, and shows how 20 great industrial nations have joined in a move that will increase standardization in practically every industry on earth.

It is an inevitable trend of the times and there is no use lamenting it. It has changed our civilization to be sure; but there are increasing indications that its going to prove a change for the better.

AN AUTOMOBILE PEST

Public Safety, the magazine issued by the National Safety Council, in its current issue calls attention to an automobile pest who usually goes unnoticed in the public prints—the driver who, coming up to a red light at a street intersection, manages to stop his car squarely in the middle of the cross-walk, forcing all pedestrians to walk around him.

The only driver who ever lands in that position is the careless one—or the inconsiderate one. It isn't a hanging offense, of course, but it does cause a terrific wear and tear on the tempers of people who are trying to cross the street at the time. It would be a good thing for every motorist to watch the lights a little more carefully. The cross-walk is for pedestrians, not waiting autos.

The Rambler

By NORMAN W. RALSTON

DREAMER

The years
Go slipping by
My door
But still I am
A boy of yore,
And still
I seek the swimming
Hole
And still I dream
I'll find my Goal;
Gray hairs are countless
In my head,
But yet I know
I'm far from Dead
For I'm a boy in Heart at least
Partaking
Of a youthful feast,
A meal of fish
That I just Caught—
Although a pair I
Really bought—
A watermelon that
I stole—
I purchased it
From Neighbor Boal—
They're dreams,
But say! They bring
Me joy
When I make out
That I'm a
Boy—
And what we mean to say
Is,
No use to think that
You are old,
But like an ancient
Giant hold
Fare forth into your Distant past
And make your childhood
Dreams all
Last
For somehow it
Will ease your pain
To think that You're
A boy again.

Life is funny. A woman never seems to kiss quite the same after you're married to her.

A couple has just separated saying they were tired of married life after having been wedded for less than a month, and it begins to look like the best we can expect out of any of the June brides and grooms is a year of matrimony.

There are 203 men in this country, observes Bob Ryder, with incomes exceeding $1,000,000 a year apiece, so we needn't worry about any possible shortage of good cabinet material as we press on toward our next great Republican victory.

It looks to us, Bob, like they always give the big salaries to the folks who don't actually need them.

TAKING NO CHANCES WITH IT

I hate a chicken's neck.
But think heaps of my own,
So I have made a vow
To let airplanes alone.

—Sam Hill, Cincy Enquirer.

I'd like to have my neck
In style all of my life,
And so I think I'll pass
The Modern Shooting Wife.

A still exploded and killed one man, but if it hadn't a dozen might have been killed.

We often wonder what a cocktail advertisement in a dry country signifies.

One of the mysteries of life is that no one ever seems to get enough of whatever he seems to want the most of.

If Al Smith loses he has one consolation. He can settle back in his governor's chair in New York and say, "Well, boys, I guess you'd better go out and elect me governor again."

SYNOPSIS
Lovely Rose Shannon, one of the dancing girls at Kelly's Kingside Cafe in the Bowery, has attracted the attention of Chuck White. He escorts her home. Later he tries to make passionate love to her. In desperation she seizes a clock and strikes him with it. Chuck drops unconscious. Terrified that she has killed him, Rose hastily packs her things and rushes into the night. Running through the darkened streets she stumbles suddenly across a satchel marked "Mercer National Bank." On her way to return it she is met by a policeman on the trail of the bandits. At the police station she is accused of complicity.

Groups of old books with musty bindings, their edges frayed and torn, were piled about carelessly in corners, while behind the conglomerate mass a long tapestry hung, concealing the interior of the store.
Stray beams of light trickled into the shop from the barred door and were quickly lost in the contrasting brightness of electricity that brought out a soft glow of color from the faded Oriental rug on the floor. To the rear of the room was a long, carved teakwood desk, beside which stood a base burner stove. All about the walls hung a collection of prints—Chinese, Japanese, Persian, Indian—interspersed with brilliantly colored wall drapes. Huge carved chairs reared their high backs against ancient tapestries, figured with unusual designs.

Chuck jerked himself away from the Professor, thrusting aside the restraining hand on his shoulder. He paused, then he frowned. "What was the matter tonight? Didn't the deal go through?"
"Sure, they knock off the trick all right, and then the bulls chase them and they throw it over the roof of the sheds so it will come down right on the street. The dicks have it by this time. We haven't got."

The Professor turned sharply as the door opened, letting in a sudden streak of grayish light along with Lefty. He hurried into the room, a bulldog edition of a newspaper in his hands.
"Well, what a fine bunch of saps you are." He turned on the two accomplices of the robbery. "Look here! He held out the paper. "Whadda you know about this!" The four men gathered round, gazing at the startling headlines that spanned the top of a page. "Girl held as accomplice in daring hold-up," they read. "Bobbed-haired bandit captured with bank satchel. Iron washers and poker chips found in place of money." Beneath the headlines, staring them in the face, was a picture of Rose with a caption containing her description and denial of any knowledge of the robbery.

"Well, I'll be damned!" Chuck was staring in sheer amazement at the photograph. "That's the chippy that tried to croak me." He turned to his companions in bewilderment.
"Well, what the—" The Professor was scanning with intent interest the story of the hold-up and the finding of the fake money. He frowned, and then he began clumping up and down the floor, his hands behind his back.

First of all he felt sure that his plans for the hold-up had been carried through without a hitch. That left his fellow-conspirators, clear. Secondly, he knew that Mug and Sparrow were telling the truth—they wouldn't dare to tell anything else, and, besides, it wouldn't do them any good, because they had, by their actions, lost their share of the loot. Chuck had not been on the scene of the robbery—he had been "out," so he said. There was only one person who actually knew where that money was now, and that person was this Rose Shannon, a dancing girl in Kelly's Cafe.

"See here," he turned abruptly on the youthful gangster who was trying to assuage the hurt eye with cold water. "What do you know about this?" he asked. "This Rose Shannon?" he demanded.
"I know plenty—now," Chuck moaned.

"No wise cracks!" the Professor returned sharply. "This is serious business. I'm going to find that money or know the reason why. Now you come across and give me the low-down on this baby. There's something phoney here, and we're going to make it it is. What kind of a moll is she, anyhow?"
"Moll, me eyebrow," Chuck returned acidly. "She's no moll. Why that baby wouldn't know a flash roll from the real stuff, honest! She's about as wise as a new-laid egg—and as fresh."

"She wasn't so dumb when she banded you that shiner!" the Professor exclaimed sarcastically.
"I skirted give him that," Lefty exclaimed with a laugh. "It's a hot one. Well, you're one up on me, Chuck, my boy. Skirts has give me lots of things—but never a kick in the beazer."

"Aw, you go to Hell!" Chuck turned his back on his tormentor. "I tell you, Professor, this kid's nothing but a Dumb-Dora fresh from the country."

"And I tell you there's something queer about this. Now listen to me!" Professor Hemmway brought his fist down on the table with a resounding bang. "That dame knows more than you think she does. Something's slipped up some place. Someone knew we were going to pull off this racket tonight. That moll was a plant. I suppose you and Sparrow were at Kelly's shooting off your faces, weren't you?" He turned on Chuck again.

"Sure we was at Kelly's! What about it?" Chuck acknowledged.

FARM STOCK

SWINE AILMENT WORRIES OWNERS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Reports from field stations of the United States Department of Agriculture show that much trouble is being experienced by swine owners through the rather widespread prevalence of necrotic enteritis in hogs, a condition sometimes referred to as necrocolitis. The ailment is characterized by inflammation of the intestines, causing diarrhea, later an impairment in appetite, unthriftiness, weakness and emaciation. While it may be produced by a specific organism, a similar condition may be induced through the feeding of irritating material, such as caustic agents in stock food or medicine and in garbage, and the taking in of foreign matter when feeding on wet, dirty ground.

Necrotic enteritis frequently occurs as a complication of hog cholera. In many cases it is entirely overlooked in the diagnosis of the more serious disease, hog cholera. In some cases the ailment found uncomplicated is erroneously diagnosed cholera itself and the simultaneous treatment applied when not indicated. The virus given in connection with serum in the simultaneous treatment for hog cholera, when necrotic enteritis is present, only serves to aggravate the existing conditions in the herd and is a waste of time and material. New conveyors of cholera infection have been created through such serious errors. Then, again, there may be instances when necrotic enteritis is present, but has not sufficiently developed to make a correct diagnosis possible. However, the result of giving virus is the same—unfavorable.

Necrotic enteritis originates in practically all cases from filthy conditions under which hogs are compelled to live, and so the disease is one that can easily be guarded against through the adoption of sanitary measures in swine raising. Once the ailment has advanced there is not much that can be done in the way of treatment. Rough feed and some so-called stock foods and tonics that may contain irritating ingredients should be avoided. The animals should be kept in clean pasture, if available. The feeding of hogs on muddy ground is a dangerous practice. Feeding platforms that can be thoroughly cleansed should be provided in the feed lot.

Pulverized copper sulphate (blue vitriol) added to the drinking water in the proportion of 1 ounce to 25 gallons, is recommended as being of some value.

Find Early Colt Gains Are Always Cheapest

Early gains are the cheapest gains with colts as well as with calves, pigs and lambs. Hence it pays to push the young foal along as rapidly as possible, suggests A. B. Caine of Iowa State college, and to do this he strongly urges getting the colt onto a ration of grain at as early an age as possible.
By supplementing the mare's milk with grain, the colt should be well started when weaning time arrives. Mr. Caine says, "Oatmeal is one of the feeds which colts will eat more readily while young, he says. Later, oats, bran and a small amount of corn may be substituted. The colt should be allowed all of the clover or alfalfa hay that it will eat."

Grinding grain for colts generally does not pay, Mr. Caine says, especially if the cost of the feed is increased 10 to 15 per cent thereby.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Much of the loss in fall pigs is due to rickets caused by the absence of direct sunlight.

An unhealthy hog is an unprofitable hog, for it will not consume enough feed to be profitable.

Success in raising lambs depends on the kind of ewes in the flock. The ewes should be thrifty and good milkers.

Feed cribs should be conveniently located in regard to the feed lot. This will mean a saving of time and labor.

Here is a mineral mixture: Ten parts wood ashes, ten of 16 per cent acid phosphate, one of common barrel salt.

Mineral mixtures should not be mixed with the grain or mash for pigs. Let them have it free choice in a self-feeder.

"Alfalfa meal" means ground alfalfa leaves. It doesn't mean ground stems. If you buy it, see that the fiber percentage isn't too high.

Weather limits sell for higher prices on the market than do rain, hams, and lambs which are doctored bring more money than those which are not.

The beef producer who can save $1 on the production of 100 pounds of beef by using modern methods is the one who will make the profit and survive.

When buying eggs or when culling the egg flock, particularly when a brood is being raised, it is better to buy from the winter in good condition.

approved today declares sympathy for the farmer's problem, and promises aid for co-operative marketing organizations and tariff assistance for the farmer where he competes with imported farm products.

Smith anticipates valiant assistance from other farm leaders. And he hopes that the spectacle of farmer crusaders clamoring at the convention gates for the privilege of marching through the hall will aid their cause in the convention. Failing that, the farmers want that spectacle to be a notice of the farmers' campaign intentions.

The exact order of business for today was undetermined at an early hour, but it was generally agreed the convention could not close before tomorrow. There will be a nominating speech for the convention's favorite, Herbert Hoover, and likewise speeches for the "favorite sons" who are beaten already in their aims at the nomination.

When these speeches will be made depends on developments of the day. Chairman George H. Moses, known as a skillful and "hard boiled" presiding officer, may call for nominating speeches even ahead of the platform consideration. But he likely will let the fight come out into the open early in the day's proceedings, and then turn to the hip-hip-hooray of the nominators.

The convention folk gathered this forenoon in an atmosphere increasingly pro-Hoover.

The tide that set in with the death of the "draft Coolidge" movement had swelled to large proportions today, and Hoover leaders hoped this wave would increase. There was lurking bitterness among the "allies" and rumors that they still will employ tactics which can embarrass both Hoover and the party in the coming campaign. For instance, they can perhaps torpedo the vice-presidential mate whom Hoover would like to have.

But many leaders are hopeful that some die-hards will link up with the last night action of the New York delegation in turning its 99 delegates to Hoover, and thus banish the bitterness of last week's warfare. So today there were many conferences before the session, aimed at healing the war wounds of the allies.

Hoover had won a quadruple victory yesterday—twice with the Farm Relief plank, again with the New York delegation action; and even earlier with the convention's heavy endorsement of the credentials committee report upholding the Hoover delegates contested from Texas.

Last night the convention assembled, but adjourned in three minutes as the platform at that time was not ready for presentation.

organized by the Republican party which pledges its strength and energy to the solution of the same.

"We promise every assistance in the reorganization of the marketing system on sounder and more economical lines and, where diversification is needed, government financial assistance during the period of transition.

"The Republican party pledges itself to the enactment of legislation creating a federal farm board vested with the necessary powers to promote the establishment of a farm marketing system of farmer-owned and controlled stabilization corporations or associations to prevent and control surpluses through orderly distribution.

"We favor adequate tariff protection to such of our agricultural products as are affected by foreign competition.

"We favor, without putting the government into business, the establishment of a federal system of organization for co-operative and orderly marketing of farm products. The vigorous efforts of this administration towards broadening our exports market will be continued.

"The Republican party pledges itself to the development and enactment of measures which will replace the agricultural interests of America on a basis of economic equality with other industry to insure its prosperity and success."

Tariff

"We reaffirm our belief in the protective tariff as a fundamental and essential principle of the economic life of this nation.

"We realize that there are certain industries which cannot now compete successfully with foreign producers because of lower foreign wages and a lower cost of living abroad, and we pledge the next Republican Congress to an examination and, where necessary, a revision of these schedules to the end that American labor in these industries may again command the home market, may maintain its standard of living, and may count upon steady employment in its accustomed field."

Foreign Policies

"We endorse the proposal of the secretary of state for a multi-lateral treaty... to renounce war... the first step in outlawing war.

"The Republican party will continue to support American rights in Mexico as elsewhere in the world, and at the same time promote the strengthening friendship and confidence.

"...The marines now in Nicaragua, are there to protect American lives and property and to aid in carrying out an agreement whereby we have undertaken to do what we can to restore and maintain order and to insure a fair and free election.

"We shall always be glad to render assistance to China when our duty is clear.

"This government definitely has refused membership in the League of Nations and to assume any obligations under the covenant of the League. On this stand we have most usefully assisted by co-operation in humanitarian and technical work undertaken by the League, without involving ourselves in European politics by accepting membership."

Labor Injunctions
"We believe that injunctions in labor disputes have in some instances been abused and have given rise to a serious question for legislation."

Public Utilities

"While recognizing that at times federal regulation might be more effective than state in controlling intra-state utilities, the party favors and has sustained state regulation, believing that such responsibility in the end will create a force of state public opinion which will be more effective in preventing discrimination and injustices."

Only brief mention was made of water power development under the head of "conservation." The party was pledged to a policy of permanent retention of power sites on government land "and power privileges on navigable streams, and one third of the potential water power resources in the United States," as has been assured by the federal water power act. Boulder Dam and Muscle Shoals legislation were not mentioned.

Four Hours After Getting Diploma Youth Is Drowned

COLUMBUS, O., June 14—Within four hours after he had received his diploma as a high school graduate, John Schweitzer, 20, was drowned in a creek near here late yesterday.

Stanley B. Webb, a class mate of Schweitzer's said the boy did not know how to swim and wanted Webb to teach him. Instead of starting in shallow water, they plunged into a deep pool, Webb said.

Schweitzer, confident in his ability to swim at his first attempt, struck out without the aid of his companion. Getting a few strokes into the water, he found he was helpless and called upon Webb for help. In an effort to assist his friend, Webb was pulled under water and almost drowned himself, he said. Schweitzer went down four times before succumbing.

CHICAGO, June 14.—The Einstein theory of relativity is correct, according to Charles E. St. John of the Mount Wilson Observatory who says he has proved it. But St. John adds, the measurement made in support of the theory are so small that ordinary human beings cannot conceive of them.

St. John, in confirming for himself the theory of relativity, made a measurement of one one-hundredth of a ten-millionth of a millimeter. An inch, if divided into strips equal to this measurement, would supply 25,000,000,000 of them.

St. John's final and complete presentation of researches extending over six years, is published in the May Astrophysical Journal, edited by Professor Edwin B. Frost, of the Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago.

In explaining the paper recently Professor Frost said, "If the Einstein theory is correct, rays of light emanating from a body which is under strong gravitational forces will be slowed down as a result. The researches were to decide whether or not the theory complies with one of the searching tests which were proposed by Einstein himself."

"The slowing of these rays or vibrations of light, Professor Frost said, "will produce a minute displacement of the dark lines in the spectrum of the body toward the red end of the spectrum, which has the longer wave lengths. A similar result would follow when the rays from a star graze another star on their way to earth. Such was the case of the famous Einstein effect during the total eclipse of the sun."

"The amount of displacement sought, and found by St. John, is very minute, being a trifle less than one one-hundredth of a ten-millionth of a millimeter, which is one twenty-fifth billion of an inch. It was a small thing to look for, but a big thing to find."

Until Einstein announced his now-famous but little understood theory, it was generally believed that light rays traveled in waves, but in a straight path, and that an interruption of this path would stop the ray. Einstein contradicted this belief, in effect, in presenting his theory, but it was not until St. John's measurements were completed that Einstein's theory in regard to light rays was proved. This theory, however, is but a part of his complete statement of the theory of relativity.

HOOVER MAY GET ALL OF STATE'S DELEGATION OF 51

KANSAS CITY, June 14.—Because Herbert Hoover will receive such a sweeping majority on the first ballot at the Republican national convention, probably late this afternoon, most of the 20 anti-Hoover delegates from Ohio are considering climbing aboard the bandwagon before it is too late.

The uncomfortable position Hoover's Ohio opponents have been in since Pennsylvania and Massachusetts made Hoover's nomination certain has increased as the hour for balloting approaches.

Hoover had 21 Buckeye votes when the convention began, but now there is a possibility he may get the entire delegation of 51 on the first ballot. In any event he is likely to pick up five or six votes at the very start. The position of the 20 as made more dangerous when they learned that the entire New York delegation of 90 agreed to support Hoover.

The decision of the New Yorkers, for the sake of party harmony, is regarded as of the utmost significance and it created a profound impression. Headed by national committeeman Charles D. Hilles, a vigorous fight was waged against Hoover among the New York delegates.

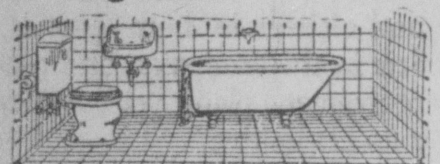

'One Of Our Gondolas Was Ripped Off By Ice!'

The dirigible Italia's crew was split into two parts when the huge bag, storm-battered and almost out of control, descended upon the bleak Northeast Land in the Arctic Circle, and a gondola, containing General Umberto Nobile and eight of his men, was ripped off by ice crags. The craft with the seven remaining members of the crew drifted nineteen miles further east. Above is the conception of Louis Biedermann, famous artist, of what happened in that moment of terror, based upon the description radiated by General Nobile to a waiting world. (International Illustrated News)

A BIG INCREASE IN MAY

The Circleville Herald and Union-Herald and Watchman have a larger circulation than the combined circulation of the former newspapers in Circleville. The people in Circleville and Pickaway county read these newspapers, they are interested in the news carried in their columns.

The Herald and Union-Herald and Watchman are on the job every day and every week to carry the news to the people.

The merchants of Circleville appreciate that these two newspapers cover their market for them better than it has ever been covered. They know that an advertisement in these newspapers covers the whole of Pickaway county. They know that it is not necessary to use other newspapers to get a complete coverage in their trading radius and are concentrating their advertising in the Circleville newspapers.

In May, The Herald and Union-Herald and Watchman gained 1620 inches in local advertising, over April. The progressive merchants are using their advertising appropriation, where it will do the most good, and are letting the Herald and Union-Herald and Watchman deliver their message for them.

NEW STORY OF CREATION

BERKELEY, Calif., June 14.—A new story of the creation of man as preached by an old sage of the Akwa'ala tribe of Lower California has been obtained by Dr. F. L. Gifford, curator of the University of California Museum of Anthropology, and Professor R. H. Lowie of the anthropology department.

According to the legend, there was a time when there was nothing but water on the earth. Two men were swimming about beneath the surface searching for land.

The men started for the surface. One came up so quickly that the salt of the water blinded him, and he sank back to the depths. The other, "Mitipa," successfully reached the air and found a refuge.

Mitipa then founded four tribes, the Maricopas, Cocopas, Mohaves and Yumas. To each tribe he gave two women. Then he hung the moon and the sun in the sky and made the earth as it is today.

"Men were made like dolls which, after a while became like men," the old Indian told the professors. "Each was given the name of his tribe and lineage."

TEX AND WRITERS START TO SEE TOM HEENEY

AND IN YACHT 'MAXINE', TOO, IN BIG STYLE

And It Looks Like They're Trying To Elevate This Blacksmith, Now

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor.
NEW YORK, June 14.—Just to show that all the Ritz is not in the one corner of the heavyweight ring, Tex Rickard is throwing a yachting party for some of us today.

The destination of the "Maxine" is Fairhaven, N. J., where Tom Heenev threatens to desert his rocking chair for active training at any moment.

Palatial yachts and snooty lawn parties were part of the picture when Georges Gorgeous Carpenter was training to fight for the heavyweight championship seven years ago. Louis Angel Firpo didn't rate them, for the South American, much to Rickard's sorrow, proved too uncouth for the original six hundred millionaires.

Gene Tunney restored the social level as a challenger, although it was obviously impossible to get a sea-going yacht up the narrow roads to Stroudsburg, Pa.

Now we come to Tom Heenev, or rather we sail to him aboard the good ship "Maxine," the yacht purchased by Tex Rickard in Florida last winter and christened by him in honor of his small daughter, another fairly recent acquisition.

The New Zealander may be a trifle flustered at receiving a visit from a yachting party. It is difficult to picture that honest, wrinkled phiz beneath an admiral's cap. Tom has been more accustomed to receiving visits from New Zealanders who wanted their horses and at his forge.

One of the purposes of the yachting party, however, is to demonstrate to anyone interested that Gene Tunney is not the only member of the heavyweight championship affair who rates a six-gun salute and a book of Shakespeare. Heenev, the bulging blacksmith, is to be elevated to the fistic peerage.

And since Tom shows no disposition of coming to the 600 millionaires, they will go to him—in their yachts.

Tex Rickard's was exposed recently as one of his own millionaires, the promoter new rating something like $1,500,000 according to Messrs. Dun and Bradstreet.

The yacht in question will sail down the coast to Fairhaven this afternoon, and the tooting of its whistles will be a signal for unwelcome activity at the Rumson Farm Kennels, where Heenev's training camp is located. The challenger is expected to east his bulk out of his favorite rocker and into a pair of tights, for the first actual work he has done in preparation for the forthcoming championship fight.

Gene Tunney also promises to start today, far removed from his boss and the yacht "Maxine," which cannot penetrate to the wilds of Speculator. Flying, rather than yachting, is the champion's choice, anyhow. Gene has plans to fly to New York for the fight on July 26.

Tex Rickard, confidentially, has other plans for Tunney's transportation. He cannot bring him to Yankee Stadium in the "Maxine," but he will see that a nice, safe, slow-moving, four-wheeled automobile is provided for the trip.

"PANTS" BURGLAR
SOUTHEND, Eng., June 14.—The "pants burglar," who steals his victim's trousers to discourage pursuit, has made his first appearance here. The idea, it is believed, came from the United States.

The Pastor Says:
A child enters your home and for 20 years makes so much noise that you can hardly stand it. Then it departs, leaving the house so silent.

GETTY'S SPORTS MATTER

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor.
The boxing federations of Continental Europe will meet soon to discuss alleged discrimination on the part of the various commissions in the United States against foreign fighters.

The point has been raised that all the present world's champions are Americans; obviously, there must be discrimination against foreigners.

Another complaint registered by European boxers who have gone home without the laurels and gold they hoped to win in the United States (and usually minus a few molaras as well) is that the leathery, lathered pastime is not under uniform control here. Occasional differences of opinion between the National Boxing Association and the New York State Athletic Commission are cited as horrible examples by dissatisfied foreigners.

Paolino Uzcudun, the Basque heavyweight, who returned to Europe this spring following his defeat at the dark brown hands of George Godfrey, was one of the principal complainants. The Basque admitted frankly that he might have been heavyweight champion of the world by this time, if it had not been for the American strategy of switching commissions on him every time he ventured into a new state.

Open Arms Policy
Whether the forthcoming meeting of Europe's boxing boards will result in a declaration of independence and the establishment of a new list of world's champions remains to be seen.

It would be interesting to have the world's champions of Europe arrayed class by class against the world's champions of the United States. Nine out of nine for the Americans would certainly be the outcome. But this is beside the point.

The fact of the matter is that far from discriminating against foreigners, the men who run the boxing business in the United States welcome the good ones with open arms.

"I only wish there were more good ones," Tex Rickard said when he heard about Europe's fistic discontent.

Rickard Pays 'Em.
It must be realized that Rickard has more to do with running the boxing business than any commission or association. For he pays the money and that's what makes the leather fly. Tex tells the truth when he says he is ever on the look-out for foreign talent. He knows how much more easily it lends itself to the bally-hoo. Recently Mr. Rickard's plans for a bit of heavyweight importation were sadly ruined by the legislative Mr. Munn of Nebraska.

The promoter had intended to bring a South American heavyweight named Campolo to this country and steam him up into a challenger for the championship. Being, because of long and sad experience, a bit skeptical as to Señor Campolo's ability, Mr. Rickard slyly dispatched Mr. Munn to Buenos Aires to see about it. Mr. Munn flattened the Argentine boxer and deflated Mr. Rickard's latest heavyweight bubble with a single wallop.

The New York Boxing Board recently went out of its way to favor a foreign contender, Kid Francis, the Italian bantam. Whereas the National Boxing Association recognized Eusby, Graham of Utica as 115-pound champion, the New York commission insisted that Francis be given a chance.

OPPOSES PAYMENT
Paris, June 14.—Georges Clemenceau, who startled the world almost two years ago by addressing a letter to the American people urging the impossibility of France paying her war debt to the United States, is still in the same frame of mind, according to an article in the weekly Candide.

The writer, who says he had a talk with the ex-Premier recently on the subject of international debts, declares the "Tiger" has another letter ready to be sent to the American people along the same lines but that he is waiting for the propitious moment to mail it.

Clemenceau, he continues, explained that the result of his first letter was excellent. That a large number of Americans are in favor of cancelling the French debt and that in his second letter he gives the American and French governments "very hard knocks."

"Why," the "Tiger" is quoted as

THE SLAVES WE OWN

Did you know that every man in the country possesses 175 slaves?

Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern University, has it all figured out. Mechanical power in the United States today rated on a per capita basis, provides manpower at the rate of 175 slaves apiece. You could spend an interesting half hour calculating the number of employees a firm like General Motors would have if these figurative slaves should suddenly become flesh and blood.

President Scott's figures are interesting. They portray graphically the transformation that the spread of mechanical power has brought. The fact that each of us does 175 times as much work as our pre-Civil War ancestors accounts for much of our prosperity. Yes, it is very fine to learn that we have 175 slaves apiece. But there is another related question which Dr. Scott did not try to answer. It is: How many masters have we got?

It is a notable thing to have 175 slaves working for you if you are your own master. But if you are not, what then? Are you any better off than the slaveless man of 1840?

This does not refer to the conditions under which you earn your bread. Naturally, in this day, few men can enjoy a job that knows no superior. It does refer to the conditions under which you order your daily life. Are you, in the real sense, independent? Do you shape your life—your daily conduct, your ideas, your mental processes—according to your wishes, or do you do it according to the dictates of invisible but powerful masters?

A man can own 175 slaves, or triple that number, and yet be a slave himself; a slave for instance, to fear, to conformity, to tradition, to ignorance, to superstition. Some men are even slaves to the mechanical servants that they take them for the be-all and end-all existence.

We have prided ourselves quite long enough on our power and our prosperity. It is about time we began to look a little more deeply into modern life, to see if we really are progressing as fast as we think.

If we are not free ourselves—free to think, act and speak as our own consciences suggest—our myriads of slaves are worse than useless.

OUR STANDARDS SPREAD

Social students who fear that standardization brought about by American industrial methods is having a bad influence on the world will not get any comfort from a report just issued by the American Engineering Standards Committee.

This report reveals that American standardization methods are spreading all over the world, and shows how 20 great industrial nations have joined in a move that will increase standardization in practically every industry on earth.

It is an inevitable trend of the times and there is no use lamenting it. It has changed our civilization to be sure; but there are increasing indications that its going to prove a change for the better.

AN AUTOMOBILE PEST

Public safety, the magazine issued by the National Safety Council, in its current issue calls attention to an automobile pest who usually goes unnoticed in the public prints—the driver who, coming up to a red light at a street intersection, manages to stop his car squarely in the middle of the cross-walk, forcing all pedestrians to walk around him.

The only driver who ever lands in that position is the careless one—or the inconsiderate one. It isn't a hanging offense, of course, but it does cause a terrific wear and tear on the tempers of people who are trying to cross the street at the time. It would be a good thing for every motorist to watch the lights a little more carefully. The cross-walk is for pedestrians, not waiting autos.

In my head,

I'm far from

For I'm a boy in

Of a youthful feast,
A meal of fish
That I just Caught—
Although a pair I
Really bought—
A watermelon that
I stole—
I purchased it

They're dreams,
But say! They bring
Me joy
When I make out
That I'm a

And what we mean to say
Is,
No use to think that
You are old,
But like an ancient

And make your childhood

For somehow it
Will ease your pain
To think that

A couple has just separated saying they were tired of married life after having been wedded for less than a month, and it begins to look like the best we can expect out of any of the June brides and grooms is a year of matrimony.

There are 203 men in this country, observes Bob Ryder, with incomes exceeding $1,000,000 a year apiece, so we needn't worry about any possible shortage of good cabinet material as we press on toward our next great Republican victory.

It looks to us, Bob, like they always give the big salaries to the folks who don't actually need them.

SYNOPSIS

Lovely Rose Shannon, one of the dancing girls at Kelly's Ringside Cafe in the Bowery, has attracted the attention of Chuck White. He escorts her home. Later he tries to make passionate love to her. In desperation she seizes a clock and strikes him with it. Chuck drops unconscious. Terrified that she has killed him, Rose hastily packs her things and rushes into the night. Running through the darkened streets she stumbles suddenly across a satchel marked "Mercer National Bank." On her way to return it she is met by a policeman on the trail of the bandits. At the police station she is accused of complicity.

Groups of old books with musty bindings, their edges frayed and torn, were piled about carelessly in corners, while behind the conglomerate mass a long tapestry hung, concealing the interior of the store.

Stray beams of light trickled into the shop from the barred door and were quickly lost in the contrasting brightness of electricity that brought out a soft glow of color from the faded Oriental rug on the floor. To the rear of the room was a long, carved teakwood desk, beside which stood a base burner stove. All about the walls hung a collection of prints—Chinese, Japanese, Persian, Indian—interspersed with brilliantly colored wall drapes. Huge carved chairs reared their high backs against ancient tapestries, figured with unusual designs.

"Can't you leave the dames alone?"

In the midst of this heterogeneous collection, a tall, gaunt man in a long frock coat moved restlessly about, striding up and down the room. A slight limp made one foot fall slightly heavier than the other, suggesting the sound of a wooden leg thump—thumping back and forth. His face was twisted into a cruel smile; his hands were clenched, and now and again he muttered to himself, taking no notice of the two other occupants of the place.

Finally, when he could no longer contain himself, he turned upon his companions, his clenched fist beating the air. "Fools, imbeciles! Two hundred grand thrown away! Oh, you white livered rats! His whole body shook in the intensity of his anger.

"It wuz all Chuck's fault," the Mug turned a cowardly face on his accuser. "If he'd showed up, we'd a got away wif de haul K. O. He wuz wif dat dame of his."

"Passing the buck again, are you? Well, let me tell you this, if I had been there it wouldn't have happened. Throwing the satchel over the fence! Why, you big gorillas, you would have made a get-away so clean and easy, I hate to think of it." The Professor spat out his words vigorously, still clumping up and down, his wooden leg sounding a muffled beat on the carpet.

"Yea, wif de bulls creepin' up on us, an' I know wut dat means—a five year stretch," the Mug interrupted. "You didn't think I wuz goin' to take no chance on at Geetz, you says it wuz gonna be easy pickin'."

"Easy? It was so simple a child could have pulled it. But you big bums—"

"Aw, it's en, Perfessor, 'em Bulls was camping on our tails," the Sparrow put in apologetically.

"Dat wouldn't of made no diff'rence," the Mug interrupted, "if dat louse—" He stopped short as the door was flung open and in walked the louse—he had been berating. Chuck looked about as best he could with one eye, for the other was swollen and completely shut, while a nasty red scar still stained his forehead. He banged the door behind him and flung himself into a chair.

The Mug and Sparrow drew back as the Professor clumped down the room and stood in front of the new arrival, his mouth twisted into a grim line, his back working nervously behind his back. "Well! There was no more he needed to say. He had put all the violence of his rage into that one word. "Aw, go to Hell! I'm damned sick. That dirty little chippy, she almost brained me." Chuck rubbed his head tenderly, making a slight grimace of pain as he touched his swollen eye.

The Professor laid a heavy hand on the boy's shoulder and jerked him to his feet. "You louse," he snarled. "Can't you leave the dames alone? Where the hell were you anyhow? If you'd been around, things might have been different tonight."

"Aw, what the hell are you beefing about? I tell you I got crowned by a jam—knocked out cold." Chuck jerked himself away from the Professor, thrusting aside the restraining hand on his shoulder. He paused; then he frowned. "What was the matter tonight? Didn't the deal go through?"

"Sure, they knock off the trick all right, and then the bulls chase them and they throw it over the roof of the shop so it will come down right in the street. The dicks have it by 'his time. We haven't got—"

The Professor turned sharply as the door opened, letting in a sudden streak of grayish light along with Lefty. He hurried into the room, a bulldog edition of a newspaper in his hands.

"Well, what a fine bunch of saps you are." He turned on the two accomplices of the robbery. "Look here!" He held out the paper. "Whadda you know about this!" The four men gathered round, gazing at the startling headlines that spanned the top of a page. "Girl held as accomplice in daring hold-up," they read. "Bobbed-haired bandit captured with bank satchel. Iron washers and poker chips found in place of money." Beneath the headlines, starting them in the face, was a picture of Rose with a caption containing her description and denial of any knowledge of the robbery.

"Well, I'll be damned!" Chuck was staring in sheer amazement at the photograph. "That's the chippy that tried to croak me." He turned to his companions in bewilderment.

"Well, what the—" The Professor was scanning with intent interest the story of the hold-up and the finding of the fake money. He frowned, and then he began clumping up and down the floor, his hands behind his back.

First of all he felt sure that his plans for the hold-up had been foiled. Then, without a hitch, that left his fellow-conspirators clear. Secondly, he knew that Mug and Sparrow were telling the truth—they wouldn't dare to tell anything else, and, besides, it wouldn't do them any good, because they had, by their actions, lost their share of the loot. Chuck had not been on the scene of the robbery—he had been "out," so he said. Then there was only one person who actually knew where that money was now, and that person was this Rose Shannon, a dancing girl in Kelly's Cafe.

"See here," he turned abruptly on the youthful gangster who was trying to assuage the hurt eye with cold water. "What do you know about this Jane—this Rose Shannon?" he demanded.

"I know plenty—now," Chuck mumbled.

"No wise cracks!" the Professor returned sharply. "This is serious business. I'm going to find that money or know the reason why. Now you come across and give me the low-down on this baby. There's something phoney here, and we're going to know what it is. What kind of a moll is she, anyhow?"

"Moll, me eyebrow," Chuck returned hotly. "She's a moll. Why that baby wouldn't know a flash roll from the real stuff, honest! She's about as wise as a new-laid egg—and as fresh."

"She wasn't so dumb when she handed you that shiner!" the Professor exclaimed sarcastically.

"A skit give him that!" Lefty exclaimed with a laugh. "At's a hot one." "Well, you're one up on me, Chuck, my boy. Skirts has give me lots of things—but never a poke in the beazer."

"Aw, you go to Hell!" Chuck turned his back on his tormentor. "I tell you, Professor, this kid's nothing but a Dumb-Dora fresh from the country."

"And I tell you there's something queer about this. Now you listen to me!" Professor Hemway brought his fist down on the table with a resounding bang. "That dame knows more than you think she does. Something's slipped up some place. Someone knew we were going to pull off this racket tonight. That moll was a plant. I suppose you and Sparrow were at Kelly's, shooting off your faces, weren't you?" He turned on Chuck again.

"Sure we was at Kelly's! What about it?" Chuck acknowledged.

FARM STOCK

SWINE AILMENT WORRIES OWNERS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Reports from field stations of the United States Department of Agriculture show that much trouble is being experienced by swine owners through the rather widespread prevalence of necrotic enteritis in hogs, a condition sometimes referred to as necrobacillosis. The ailment is characterized by inflammation of the intestines, causing diarrhea, later an impairment in appetite, unthriftiness, weakness and emaciation. While it may be produced by a specific organism, a similar condition may be induced through the feeding of irritating material, such as caustic agents in stock food or medicine and in garbage, and the taking in of foreign matter when feeding on wet, dirty ground.

Necrotic enteritis frequently occurs as a complication of hog cholera. In many cases it is entirely overlooked in the diagnosis of the more serious disease, hog cholera. In some cases the ailment found uncomplicated is erroneously diagnosed cholera itself and the simultaneous treatment applied when not indicated. The virus given in connection with serum in the simultaneous treatment for hog cholera, when necrotic enteritis is present, only serves to aggravate the existing conditions in the herd and is a waste of time and material. New centers of cholera infection have been created through such serious errors. Then, again, there may be instances when necrotic enteritis is present, but has not sufficiently developed to make a correct diagnosis possible. However, the result of giving virus is the same—unfavorable.

Necrotic enteritis originates in practically all cases from filthy conditions under which hogs are compelled to live, and so the disease is one that can easily be guarded against through the adoption of sanitary measures in swine raising. Once the ailment has advanced there is not much that can be done in the way of treatment. Rough feed and some so-called stock foods and tonics that may contain irritating ingredients should be avoided. The animals should be kept in clean pasture, if available. The feeding of hogs on muddy ground is a dangerous practice. Feeding platforms that can be thoroughly cleansed should be provided in the feed lot.

Pulverized copper sulphate (blue vitriol) added to the drinking water in the proportion of 1 ounce to 25 gallons, is recommended as being of some value.

Find Early Colt Gains Are Always Cheapest

Early gains are the cheapest gains with colts as well as with calves, pigs and lambs. Hence it pays to push the young foal along as rapidly as possible, suggests A. B. Caine of Iowa State college, and to do this he strongly urges getting the colt onto a ration of grain at as early an age as possible. By supplementing the mare's milk with grain, the colt should be well started when weaning time arrives. Mr. Caine says, "Oatmeal is one of the feeds which colts will eat more readily while young, he says. Later, oats, bran and a small amount of corn may be substituted. The colt should be allowed all of the clover or alfalfa hay that it will eat."

Grinding grain for colts generally does not pay, Mr. Caine says, especially if the cost of the feed is increased 10 to 15 per cent thereby.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

Much of the loss in fall pigs is due to rickets caused by the absence of direct sunlight.

An unhealthy hog is an unprofitable hog, for it will not consume enough feed to be profitable.

Success in raising lambs depends on the kind of ewes in the flock. The ewes should be thrifty and good milkers.

Feed cribs should be conveniently located in regard to the feed lot. This will mean a saving of time and labor.

Here is a mineral mixture: Ten parts wood ashes, ten of 16 per cent acid phosphate, one of common barrel salt.

Mineral mixtures should not be mixed with the grain or mash for pigs. Let them have it free choice in a free-feeder.

"Alfalfa meal" means ground alfalfa leaves. It doesn't mean ground roots. If you buy it, see that the fiber percentage isn't too high.

Wether lambs sell for higher prices on the market than do ram lambs, and lambs which are docked bring more money than those which are not.

The beef producer who can save $1 on the production of 100 pounds of beef by using modern methods is the one who will make the profit and survive.

When buying ewes or when culling the ewe flock, particular attention should be given to their teeth. "Broken-mouthed" ewes (old ewes that are losing their teeth) will not come through the winter in good condition.

—In the four-year period of the present administration naval appropriations have reached $1,250,000.

approved today declares sympathy for the farmer's problem, and promises aid for co-operative marketing organizations and a tariff assistance for the farmer where he competes with imported farm products.

Smith anticipates valiant assistance from other farm leaders. And he hopes that the spectacle of farmer crusaders clamoring at the convention gates for the privilege of marching through the hall will aid their cause in the convention. Failing that, the farmers want that spectacle to be a notice of the farmers' campaign intentions.

The exact order of business for today was undetermined at an early hour, but it was generally agreed the convention could not close before tomorrow. There will be a nominating speech for the convention's favorite, Herbert Hoover, and likewise speeches for the "favorite sons" who are beaten already in their aims at the nomination.

When these speeches will be made depends on developments of the day. Chairman George H. Moses, known as a skillful and "hard boiled" presiding officer, may call for nominating speeches even ahead of the platform consideration. But he likely will let the fight come out into the open early in the day's proceedings, and then turn to the hip-hip-hooray of the nominators.

The convention folk gathered this forenoon in an atmosphere increasingly pro-Hoover.

The tide that set in with the death of the "draft Coolidge" movement had swelled to large proportions today, and Hoover leaders hoped this wave would increase. There was lurking bitterness among the "allies," and rumors that they still will employ tactics which can embarrass both Hoover and the party in the coming campaign. For instance, they can perhaps torpedo the vice-presidential mate whom Hoover would like to have.

But many leaders are hopeful that some die-hards will link up with the last night action of the New York delegation in turning its 90 delegates to Hoover, and thus banish the bitterness of last week's warfare. So today there were many conferences before the session, aimed at healing the war wounds of the allies.

Hoover had won a quadruple victory yesterday—twice with the Farm Relief plank, again with the New York delegation action; and even earlier with the convention's heavy endorsement of the credentials committee report upholding the Hoover delegates contested from Texas.

Last night the convention assembled, but adjourned in three minutes, as the platform at that time was not ready for presentation.

ognized by the Republican party which pledges its strength and energy to the solution of the same.

"We promise every assistance in the reorganization of the marketing system on sounder and more economical lines and, where diversification is needed, government financial assistance during the period of transition.

"The Republican party pledges itself to the enactment of legislation creating a federal farm board vested with the necessary powers to promote the establishment of a farm marketing system of farmer owned and controlled stabilization corporations or associations to prevent and control surpluses through orderly distribution.

"We favor adequate tariff protection to such of our agricultural products as are affected by foreign competition.

"We favor, without putting the government into business, the establishment of a federal system of organization for co-operative and orderly marketing of farm products. "The vigorous efforts of this administration towards broadening our exports market will be continued.

"The Republican party pledges itself to the development and enactment of measures which will place the agricultural interests of America on a basis of economic equality with other industry to insure its prosperity and success."

Tariff

"We reaffirm our belief in the protective tariff as a fundamental and essential principle of the economic life of this nation.

"We realize that there are certain industries which cannot now compete successfully with foreign producers because of lower foreign wages and a lower cost of living abroad, and we pledge the next Republican Congress to an examination and, where necessary, a revision of these schedules to the end that American labor in these industries may again command the home market, and may count upon steady employment in its accustomed field."

Foreign Policies

"We endorse the proposal of the secretary of state for a multi-lateral treaty...to renounce war...the first step in outlawing war. "The Republican party will continue to support American rights in Mexico as elsewhere in the world, and at the same time promote the strengthening friendship and confidence.

"...The marines now in Nicaragua, are there to protect American lives and property and to aid in carrying out an agreement whereby we have undertaken to do what we can to restore and maintain order and to insure a fair and free election.

"We shall always be glad to render assistance to China when our duty is clear.

"This government definitely has refused membership in the League of Nations and to assume any obligations under the covenant of the League. On this stand we have most usefully assisted by co-operation in humanitarian and technical work undertaken by the League, without involving ourselves in European politics by accepting membership."

Labor Injunctions

"We believe that injunctions in labor disputes have in some instances been abused and have given rise to a serious question for legislation."

Public Utilities

"While recognizing that at times federal regulation might be more effective than state in controlling intra-state utilities, the party favors and has sustained state regulation, believing that such responsibility in the end will create a force of state public opinion which will be more effective in preventing discrimination and injustices."

Only brief mention was made of water power development under the head of "conservation." The party was pledged to a policy of permanent retention of power sites on government land "and power privileges on navigable streams, and one third of the potential water power resources in the United States," as has been assured by the federal water power act. Boulder Dam and Muscle Shoals legislation were not mentioned.

Four Hours After Getting Diploma Youth Is Drowned

COLUMBUS, O., June 14—Within four hours after he had received his diploma as a high school graduate, John Schweitzer, 20, was drowned in a creek near here late yesterday.

Stanley B. Webb, a class mate of Schweitzer's said the boy did not know how to swim and wanted Webb to teach him. Instead of starting in shallow water, they plunged into a deep pool, Webb said.

Schweitzer, confident in his ability to swim at his first attempt, struck out without the aid of his companion. Getting a few strokes into the water, he found he was helpless and called upon Webb for help. In an effort to assist his friend, Webb was pulled under water and almost drowned himself, he said. Schweitzer went down four times before succumbing.

A BIG INCREASE IN MAY

The Circleville Herald and Union-Herald and Watchman have a larger circulation than the combined circulation of the former newspapers in Circleville. The people in Circleville and Pickaway county read these newspapers, they are interested in the news carried in their columns.

The Herald and Union-Herald and Watchman are on the job every day and every week to carry the news to the people.

The merchants of Circleville appreciate that these two newspapers cover their market for them better than it has ever been covered. They know that an advertisement in these newspapers covers the whole of Pickaway county. They know that it is not necessary to use other newspapers to get a complete coverage in their trading radius and are concentrating their advertising in the Circleville newspapers.

In May, The Herald and Union-Herald and Watchman gained 1620 inches in local advertising, over April. The progressive merchants are using their advertising appropriation, where it will do the most good, and are letting the Herald and Union-Herald and Watchman deliver their message for them.

PRESENT FAREWELL GIFT TO MRS. MAXWELL

Following the Maxwell concert at the Presbyterian church Tuesday night, Miss Abbe Clark informally entertained those who participated in the recital, in honor of Mrs. Maxwell who leaves on June 20 for Montreal, from where she will sail for Europe to spend the summer. At this gathering of the students and teachers, the latter was presented with a beautifully fitted leather bag as a farewell gift.

Hill, Sara Jane Neff, Aileen and Marjorie Skinner, Mabel Grant, Dorothy McKinley, Claribel Poole, Katharine Keller, Eleanor Finch, Blanche Steele, Bertha Willoughby, Doris and Evelyn Liston, Freda Mattheas and Jane McMillen.

MONROE CHAMPION CLOTHING CLUB

The second meeting of the Monroe Champion Clothing club was held June 12, at Mrs. Hosler's.

The meeting was called to order by the president. Fourteen members responded to roll call by telling "Why I Am a Club Member," out of sixteen members who are enrolled, and the minutes of the last meeting were read. The first psalm was read followed by singing "Dwelling in Buehah Land" and the Lord's Prayer.

There was also an interesting program, which consisted of a piano solo by Marjorie Arbogast, a story, Mary Margaret List; "Why I Am a Club Member," by Mabel Smith; "The Country Girl's Creed," by Frances Arbogast; a solo, "Ramona," Virginia Porter; then everyone stood and sang "Ohio's Sons and Daughters" for the last song.

Old business was discussed and new business brought before the house.

The club will be glad to have any of the other clubs in the county visit them at their meetings, also the parents and visitors of the community.

The president appointed Frances Arbogast, Mary Margaret List and Naomi Hatfield as the program committee.

The club gave Mrs. Hosler a rising vote of thanks for her home and dainty refreshments, consisting of cake and strawberries. The cheer leader performed her duty and the members enjoyed the games and accomplished a bit of cutting out garments. The meeting adjourned to meet June 26, at Mrs. Hosler's.

"THE COLLEGE WIDOW"

You've all heard about the college widow. At least, these Pickaway-co. boys back from school have, and the girls, too. Well, Dolores Costello makes an ideal one in "The College Widow" which comes to the Grand theatre tonight. First, a stage favorite, then a musical comedy success and now a screen triumph, is this comedy drama. Forty fighters fall for a flirt when Jane decides to bring victory to the college colors, and adopts a clever ruse.

RACING MELODRAMA

The production of "In Old Kentucky" will prove fortunate for Director John M. Stahl and a number of members of the cast, including James Murray, Wesley Barry, Helene Costello, Dorothy Cummings and Edward Martin-dale.

This picture, which opened yesterday at the Metropolitan Theatre, is one of the best racing melodramas which have ever come to the screen. Aside from this it brings to the screen two new faces and sees the return of Wesley Barry, who has been out of pictures during the last two years.

James Murray, who has been widely heralded as King Vidor's sensational screen find and who has recently played the leading male role of Vidor's "The Crowd," comes up to all that has been said about him. He is a "find"—and an important one.

TEX AND WRITERS START TO SEE TOM HEENEY

AND IN YACHT 'MAXINE', TOO, IN BIG STYLE

And It Looks Like They're Trying To Elevate This Blacksmith, Now

By FRANK GETTY
United Press Sports Editor.
NEW YORK, June 14.—Just to show that all the Ritz is not in the one corner of the heavyweight ring, Tex Rickard is throwing a yachting party for some of us today.

The destination of the "Maxine" is Fairhaven, N. J., where Tom Heenev threatens to desert his rocking chair for active training at any moment.

Palatial yachts and snooty lawn parties were part of the picture when Georges Gorgeous Carpentier was training to fight for the heavyweight championship seven years ago. Louis Angel Firpo didn't rate them, for the South American, much to Rickard's sorrow, proved too uncouth for the original six hundred millionaires.

Gene Tunney restored the social level as a challenger, although it was obviously impossible to get a sea-going yacht up the narrow roads to Stroudsburg, Pa.

Now we come to Tom Heenev, or rather we sail to him aboard the godd ship "Maxine" the yacht purchased by Tex Rickard in Florida last winter and christened by him in honor of his small daughter, another fairly recent acquisition.

The New Zealander may be a trifle flustered at receiving a visit from a yachting party. It is difficult to picture that honest, wrinkled phiz beneath an admiral's cap. Tom has been more accustomed to receiving visits from New Zealanders who wanted their horses shod at his forge.

One of the purposes of the yachting party, however, is to demonstrate to anyone interested that Gene Tunney is not the only member of the heavyweight championship affair who rates a six gun salute and a book of Shakespeare. Heenev, the bulging blacksmith, is to be elevated to the fistic peerage.

And since Tom shows no disposition of coming to the 600 millionaires, they will go to him—in their yachts.

Tex Rickards was exposed recently as one of his own millionaires, the promoter now rating something like $1,500,000 according to Messrs. Dun and Bradstreet.

The yacht in question will sail down the coast to Fairhaven this afternoon, and the tooting of its whistles will be a signal for unwelcome activity at the Rumson Farm Kennels, where Heenev's training camp is located. The challenger is expected to east his bulk out of his favorite rocker and into a pair of tights, for the first actual work he has done in preparation for the forthcoming championship fight.

Gene Tunney also promises to start today, far removed from his boss and the yacht "Maxine," which cannot penetrate to the wilds of Speculator. Flying, rather than yachting, is the champion's choice, anyhow. Gene has plans to fly to New York for the fight on July 26.

Tex Rickard, confidentially, has other plans for Tunney's transportation. He cannot bring him to Yankee Stadium in the "Maxine," but he will see that a nice, safe, slow-moving, four-wheeled automobile, is provided for the trip.

GETTY'S SPORTS MATTER

By FRANK GETTY

United Press Sports Editor.
The boxing federations of Continental Europe will meet soon to discuss alleged discrimination on the part of the various commissions in the United States against foreign fighters.

The point has been raised that all the present world's champions are Americans; obviously, there must be discrimination against foreigners.

Another complaint registered by European boxers who have gone home without the laurels and gold they hoped to win in the United States (and usually minus a few molars as well) is that the leathery, lathered pastime is not under uniform control here. Occasional differences of opinion between the National Boxing Association and the New York State Athletic Commission are cited as horrible examples by dissatisfied foreigners.

Paolino Uzcudun, the Basque heavyweight, who returned to Europe this spring following his defeat at the dark brown hands of George Godfrey, was one of the principal complainants. The Basque admitted frankly that he might have been heavyweight champion of the world by this time, if it had not been for the American strategy of switching commissions on him every time he ventured into a new state.

Open Arms Policy
Whether the forthcoming meeting of Europe's boxing boards will result in a declaration of independence and the establishment of a new list of world's champions remains to be seen.

It would be interesting to have the world's champions of Europe arrayed class by class against the world's champions of the United States. Nine out of nine for the Americans would certainly be the outcome. But this is beside the point.

The fact of the matter is that far from discriminating against foreigners, the men who run the boxing business in the United States welcome the good ones with open arms.

"I only wish there were more good ones," Tex Rickard said when he heard about Europe's fistic discontent.

Rickard Pays 'Em.
It must be realized that Rickard has more to do with running the boxing business than any commission or association. For he pays the money and that's what makes the leather fly. Tex tells the truth when he says he is ever on the look-out for foreign talent. He knows how much more easily it lends itself to the bally-hoo. Recently Mr. Rickard's plans for a bit of heavyweight importation were sadly ruined by the legislation of Mr. Munn of Nebraska.

The promoter had intended to bring a South American heavyweight named Campolo to this country and steam him up into a challenger for the championship. Being, because of long and sad experience, a bit skeptical as to Señor Campolo's ability, Mr. Rickard slyly dispatched Mr. Munn to Buenos Aires to see about it. Mr. Munn flattened the Argentine boxer and deflated Mr. Rickard's latest heavyweight bubble with a single wallop.

The New York Boxing Board recently went out of its way to favor a foreign contender, Kid Francis, the Italian bantam. Whereas the National Boxing Association recognized Bushy Graham of Utica as 118-pound champion, the New York commission insisted that Francis be given a chance.

OPPOSES PAYMENT

Paris, June 14.—Georges Clemenceau, who startled the world almost two years ago by addressing a letter to the American people urging the impossibility of France paying her war debt to the United States, is still in the same frame of mind, according to an article in the weekly Candide.

The writer, who says he had a talk with the ex-Premier recently on the subject of international debts, declares the "Tiger" has another letter ready to be sent to the American people along the same lines but that he is waiting for the propitious moment to mail it.

Clemenceau, he continues, explained that the result of his first letter was excellent, that a large number of Americans are in favor of cancelling the French debt and that in his second letter he gives the American and French governments "very hard knocks."

"Why," the "Tiger" is quoted as

INCH IN ITS TIME PLAYS MANY PARTS

Twenty-five Billions Of Them
To Be Exact—And This Scientist Was

CHICAGO, June 14.—The Einstein theory of relativity is correct, according to Charles E. St. John of the Mount Wilson Observatory who says he has proved it. But St. John adds, the measurement made in support of the theory are so small that ordinary human beings cannot conceive of them.

St. John, in confirming for himself the theory of relativity, made a measurement of one one-hundredth of a ten-millionth of a millimeter. An inch, if divided into strips equal to this measurement, would supply 25,000,000,000 of them.

St. John's final and complete presentation of researches extending over six years, is published in the May Astrophysical Journal, edited by Professor Edwin B. Frost, of the Yerkes Observatory of the University of Chicago.

In explaining the paper recently Professor Frost said, "If the Einstein theory is correct, rays of light emanating from a body which is under strong gravitational forces will be slowed down as a result. The researches were to decide whether or not the theory complies with one of the searching tests which were proposed by Einstein himself."

"The slowing of these rays or vibrations of light, Professor Frost said, "will produce a minute displacement of the dark lines in the spectrum of the body toward the red end of the spectrum, which has the longer wave lengths. A similar result would follow when the rays from a star graze another star on their way to earth. Such was the case of the famous Einstein effect during the total eclipse of the sun."

"The amount of displacement sought, and found by St. John, is very minute, being a trifle less than one one-hundredth of a ten-millionth of a millimeter, which is one twenty-fifth billion of an inch. It was a small thing to look for, but a big thing to find."

Until Einstein announced his now-famous but little understood theory, it was generally believed that light rays traveled in waves, but in a straight path, and that an interruption of this path would stop the ray. Einstein contradicted this belief, in effect, in presenting his theory, but it was not until St. John's measurements were completed that Einstein's theory in regard to light rays was proved. This theory, however, is but a part of his complete statement of the theory of relativity.

HOOVER MAY GET ALL OF STATE'S DELEGATION OF 51

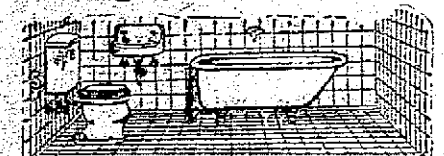

KANSAS CITY, June 14.—Because Herbert Hoover will receive such a sweeping majority on the first ballot at the Republican national convention, probably late this afternoon, most of the 20 anti-Hoover delegates from Ohio are considering climbing aboard the bandwagon before it is too late.

The uncomfortable position Hoover's Ohio opponents have been in since Pennsylvania and Massachusetts made Hoover's nomination certain has increased as the hour for balloting approaches.

Hoover had 21 Buckeye votes when the convention began, but now there is a possibility he may get the entire delegation of 51 on the first ballot. In any event he is likely to pick up five or six votes at the very start. The position of the 20 as made more dangerous when they learned that the entire New York delegation of 90 agreed to support Hoover.

The decision of the New Yorkers, for the sake of party harmony, is regarded as of the utmost significance and it created a profound impression. Headed by national committeeman Charles D. Hilles, a vigorous fight was waged against Hoover among the New York delegates.

'One Of Our Gondolas Was Ripped Off By Ice!'

The dirigible Italia's crew was split into two parts when the huge bag, storm-battered and almost out of control, descended upon the bleak Northeast Land in the Arctic Circle, and a gondola, containing General Umberto Nobile and eight of his men, was ripped off by ice crags. The craft with the seven remaining members of the crew drifted sixteen miles further east. Above is the conception of Louis Biedermann, famous artist, of what happened in that moment of terror, based upon the description radioed by General Nobile to a waiting world. (International Illustrated News)

COUNTY FARMERS ATTEND OPENING OF NEW EDIFICE

Pickaway-Co. Represented At Dedication of Farm Building

Farmers from every section of Ohio mixed with Columbus people at the dedication of the new Farm Bureau building, according to those from this county who attended the ceremonies in Columbus Tuesday.

Opening of the new building gives the Ohio farm bureau and its affiliated groups the best quarters for carrying forward the program of organized farmers that can be found in the country, says Edw. C. Rector who led the delegation of farmers from Pickaway county. More than 26,000 feet of floor space is being used by the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, the Ohio Farm Bureau Corporation, the Farm Bureau Mutual Automobile Insurance Company, the Ohio Farm Bureau Service Company, Association and various departments of these organizations. The new quarters are located on East Broad Street near many blocks from the State Capitol. The new building is owned by more than 25,000 farmers.

President L. B. Palmer of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation presided at the dedication pro-Secretary Murray D. Lincoln, on gram last Tuesday. Secretaries, the building owners, formally presented the building to the service of Ohio agriculture. Following him on the program came greetings from the Michigan Farm Bureau, brought by M. L. Noon, its president; the American Farm Bureau Federation, brought by Mrs. C. W. Sewell of its home and community department. The National Grange was represented by Master L. J. Taber, and the State Grange by Master H. A. Caton.

A feature of the program was the presentation of the original board of directors of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation by Geo. L. Cooley, familiarly known among farmers as the "father of the Ohio and American Farm Bureaus sketched the growth of the organization, and James J. Thomas, Mayor of Columbus, welcomed the farmers to the city.

The afternoon was given over to the inspection of the new building and study of the work of the various branches of the farm bureau as carried on in the new headquarters.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

BY
EDSON R. WAITE

THAT newspaper advertising is an effective force in promoting sales—it actse as a stimulant.

THAT it has power to bring business and to stir up new business in dull times.

THAT it brings people into a store that never were there before.

THAT it brings turnover, which is the real success of any business.

THAT the most convincing proof that advertising pays is the fact that no large business has ever been built without the aid of newspaper advertising.

THAT newspaper advertising impresses the name of the advertiser on the public.

THAT it makes people realize that they can get value and satisfaction at the store that advertises.

THAT any business that wants to be a leader and to have a really growing business must be a steady, consistent advertiser.

NEW STORY OF CREATION

BERKELEY, Calif., June 14.—A new story of the creation of man as preached by an old sage of the Akwa'ala tribe of Lower California has been obtained by Dr. F. L. Gifford, curator of the University of California Museum of Anthropology, and Professor R. H. Lowie of the anthropology department.

According to the legend, there was a time when there was nothing but water on the earth. Two men were swimming about beneath the surface, searching for land.

The men started for the surface. One came up so quickly that the salt of the water blinded him, and he sank back to the depths. The other, "Mitipa," successfully reached the air and found a refuge.

Mitipa then founded four tribes, the Maricopas, Cocopas, Mohaves and Yumas. To each tribe he gave two women. Then he hung the moon and the sun in the sky and made the earth as it is today.

"Men were made like dolls which, after a while, became like men," the old Indian told the professors. "Each was given the name of his tribe and lineage."

"THE COLLEGE WIDOW"

You've all heard about the college widow. At least, these Pickaway-co. boys back from school have, and the girls, too. Well, Dolores Costello makes an ideal one in "The College Widow" which comes to the Grand theatre tonight. First, a stage favorite, then a musical comedy success and now a screen triumph, is this comedy drama. Forty fighters fall for a flirt when Jane decides to bring victory to the college colors, and adopts a clever ruse.

RACING MELODRAMA

The production of "In Old Kentucky" will prove fortunate for Director John M. Stahl and a number of members of the cast, including James Murray, Wesley Barry, Helene Costello, Dorothy Cummings and Edward Martin-dale.

This picture, which opened yesterday at the Metropolitan Theatre, is one of the best racing melodramas which has ever come to the screen. Aside from this it brings to the screen two new faces and sees the return of Wesley Barry, who has been out of pictures during the last two years. James Murray, who has been widely heralded as King Vidor's sensational screen find and who has recently played the leading male role of Vidor's "The Crowd," comes up to all that has been said about him. He is a "find"—and an important one.
